EBERS begs most particularly to refer his Subscribers to the Conditions and Regulations; and, he trusts, that they will be strictly observed, which will prevent the disagreeable necessity of their being enforced on his Part.

Conditions and Regulations.

1. THE SUBSCRIPTION, &c. TO BE PAID AT THE TIME OF SUBSCRIBING, and at the Commencement of every subsequent Term, and a Deposit made, if required.

2. The Expence of the Box and Catalogue, Carriage to and from the Library, Postage, &c. to be defrayed by the Subscriber.

3. If a Subscriber (through any Cause whatever) should detain a Book or Books beyond the time subscribed for, the Subscription will continue open, and must be paid till such Books are returned.

DANGEROUS CONNECTIONS: A SERIES OF LETTERS; selected from the Correspondence of a Private Circle, and published for the benefit of Society. Being a Translation of the celebrated French Novel "Liaisons Dangereuses." By M. C de L.

"I have observed the Manners of the Times, and have wrote those Letters." Four Volumes, Price 1*l.* 4*s.*

FREDERICK de MONTFORD. Three Volumes 12mo. Price 1*l.* 1*s.* Boards. By the Author of "The Pursuits of Fashion."

For a character of this Work vide the Critical, Monthly, and Anti-Jacobin Reviews for October, 1811; in which (after paying the Author many high encomiums for his moral intention, strict discrimination of character, just satire, and elegance of style,) they conclude their comments thus:

"We must congratulate our readers on the appearance of a Novel, which they may, with perfect safety, put into the hands of their wives and daughters, without the smallest dread of shocking their modesty, or of injuring their religious or moral principles. It is not, indeed, too much to say in its praise, that, from the perusal of it, instruction as well as amusement may be derived."—Anti-Jacobin.

"There are some pointed remarks and some good humoured ridicule on the fashionable follies of the day, with a true picture of an unfeeling jockey, which may afford our inconsiderate youth a good specimen of gambling friendships."—Critical Review.

"We found in some passages a novelty of idea, and a vein of humour, which announce talents that would be equal to the production of a work more meritorious than this class of writing."—Monthly Rev.

"De Montford is considerably above the ordinary run of these things. It possesses both ingenuity and good contrivance, the characters are preserved with consistency, and many of the scenes are well wrought."— Brit. Critic, November.
